

Distinction without a difference

- Even though  $a \rightarrow b \rightarrow c$  and  $(a, b) \rightarrow c$  are distinct types, they “mean the same thing.”
- When we search one type, we’d like to match both!
- What can we use to capture this notion?